WILL TUNNEL UNDER DEPOT

City, in Placing Its Mains, Is Not to be Denied the Right to Use Twenty-fourth Street in Reaching West Ogden—Weber River Is Being Diverted.

Manager Kircher of the Waterworks department of the city has a force of twenty-five men busily engaged today changing the flow of the water of the Weber river from the east to the west side of the channel. This accomplished and the water main leading to the western limits of the city will be laid three feet under the bed of the river on the east side, after which the flow will be turned to the east side to allow of trenching on the west side of the channel.

At the point where the trenching has to be done, the channel is about 200 feet wide, but it will require but a short time to do the work.

Sandbags will be used to turn the flow of the water and the trench will be boxed in with timbers to protect the workmen.

It is said that it will take the work being done during the low water of the river, for it would be next to impossible to change the flow of the river at the high-water period.

The pipe laid across the river bed, Manager Kircher says he will turn his attention to the placing of the water on the east side of the West Ogden extension. The railroad company has notified the city workers that they cannot use the ground to the south of the new freight depot, and that has temporarily checked operations at that point, but Mr. Kircher says that when he gets ready to make the connection at Wall avenue, he will tunnel under the freight depot on Twenty-fourth street, if the railroad people still insist that the city must not use the company's ground.

It will require a little extra work to tunnel under the depot, but it will place the water main on the city's own ground and will bar the possibility of future disputes regarding right of way.

fendants the south side of the entrance into the Granger rinky to the depot, to be used for a lunch stand, general confection, hot coffee and summer drinks store. She rented the place for $20 a month, making a part payment when the agreement was entered into, the balance to be paid at the end of the month.

The plaintiff testified that after she had occupied the place about one week the defendants took forcible possession of the place, threw her store fixtures and goods, wares and merchandise into the street, and they never returned to her the store.

The defense made a motion to the court that the case be continued on the ground that the defendant Brown could not be located by the attorney and that the other defendants had not been served with notice of the proceedings.

The motion was denied and the parties ordered to proceed with the trial.

The inclement weather of this afternoon did not deter the building committee of the Weber club in breaking ground for the proposed clubhouse to be erected on Twenty-fourth street, just east of the Episcopal church property. The ceremony, though shortened by the rain, took place at 1 o'clock.

About fifty members of the club banded the weeping clouds and accompanied the building committee to the clubhouse site. The crowd was led by A. G. Fe., chairman of the committee, who carried with him a shovel. After a few remarks by Mr. Tell and by President A. R. Heywood, the former pushed the shovel into the mud and reverently threw a few pounds of real estate in an empty wagon that stood near by. Others in turn followed until fifty shovelfuls of dirt had been thrown into the wagon. The amateur excavators were all of the opinion that the wagon was one left there for the purpose by J. T. O'Neill, the contractor, who is to finish the work of excavation and build the foundation.

It chanced that the wagon belonged to another party and that this party in leaving the vehicle there had no intention of having it filled with dirt. While this incident was not scheduled it caused only amusement and no harm and the wagon was hauled away and dumped.

Following the breaking of ground the building committee repaired to the club rooms where a banquet was served by Mr. Tell and the plans of the building discussed.

The excavation just started will be 43x120 feet in size. The foundation will be of concrete. It is likely that the real work of excavation will be started by the contractor tomorrow and will be completed, together with the foundation, by the time the contractors for the building proper are ready to begin the super-structure. This will not be before spring.

Anderson claims he is suffering from abdominal troubles, which he says, began to affect him last May. On election day he informed Dr. T. G. Odell that he had contracted ptomaine poisoning through shrimp salad. Dr. Odell claims that it would have been impossible for this disease to have remained in his system long enough to be responsible for the delay at Butte, Mont., Wednesday night, in which Chief Deputy White found it necessary to summon surgeons.

On the other hand, it is the belief of Dr. Odell, who carefully examined his condition last night, that abdominal pains were brought about by worry, which has had a telling effect upon the physical condition of the prisoner.

However, Dr. Odell advised, after he had left the patient at the county jail last night, to give him a day or two to regain a normal pulse action before putting him through the rigorous tests of an examination.

It is the first admission of Anderson that he fled into Canada when he dived upon him that he was facing trouble. He says he did not exactly know where he was going, but simply went in an effort to get out of the reach of the law. He claims that he left Salt Lake when the situation had begun to look gloomy for him, with the intention of visiting his sister at Coalville.

In Ogden the fear of either having been found out or the impending danger of being found out caused him to buy a railroad ticket for Raymond where he thought he would meet friends.

When he stepped into the little settlement of Alberta province he was surprised to be confronted by George Budd, a former Salt Lake newspaper man. According to the story told Deputy White by Budd, Anderson was unable to explain his presence in that part of Canada, and Budd's questions irritated him. He had been in Raymond less than two hours when the marshal of that village informed him through advices furnished by Sheriff Sharp that he was wanted back in Salt Lake on graft charges.

ANDERSON IS NOW IN JAIL

Salt Lake, Dec. 9.—C. B. Anderson, former superintendent of the county infirmary, who was arrested at Raymond, Alberta province, Canada, on charges of graft in connection with the installation of the voting machines during the last election and other irregularities while in charge of the infirmary, was brought back to Salt Lake last night by Chief Deputy Sheriff J. Parley White.

Anderson has lost about $0 pounds in weight since he fled into the provinces of the dominion government about two weeks ago.

Immediately after his arrival at the county jail Anderson was visited by Mrs. Anderson. The scene was pathetic. Mrs. Anderson found difficulty in clearly establishing within her mind that her husband was actually in jail and she pleaded for his release.

Says He Is Ill.

census gave $2,972, or 771 less than today's revised figures.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 9.—Statistician Hunt, sent to Tacoma by the census bureau, announced today, after one month's work of re-checking and re-counting, that the city's population is $2,473. This is a gain of more than $600 as compared with the figures given out by Director Darand some time ago, but is about $3,000 below the figures originally turned in by the local supervisor, A. R. Kelly.

Hunt announced that on Monday he would begin preparing the evidence upon which he hoped to convict a number of dishonest enumerators in the federal court.

STRANGER IS A STRANGE FELLOW

Penniless, yet harboring the hallucination that he is worth millions, Charles P. Leach, who claims New York city as his home, has been waiting at the Union depot for a check for $500 which he believes has been forwarded to him by his Gotham bankers.

Leach is apparently rational upon every subject except money, on which question he talks like a frenzied fiend. He states that he is the brother-in-law of Nat Goodwin, the actor, and that he is now on his way east after visiting the actor at his California home.

"It is hard to be broke," he said dolorously to a reporter. "Hard to be broke when one is worth a hundred million dollars. That's my fix. But I'll be all right in a few hours—as soon as my check gets here."

"Telegraphed east for money, have you?" asked the reporter, looking deeply into the man's eyes for any trace of insanity which might be lurking there to find none visible.

"Yes, I've wired for $500," replied Leach, casually flicking the scant hairs from an exceedingly short cigar butt.

"I'm on my way east now. Father's will is to be executed. The old gentleman was worth lots of money. Sold a block at the corner of Forty-second and Broadway not long ago for $500,000,000. He bought it years ago for $300,000. I know he was certainly some profit in real estate, wasn't it?"

"Not a bad spec," put back the reporter.

"I own a warehouse in New York. There are five brothers and father gave us each a warehouse. We are doing business with all the biggest importers and brokers in the city. You see, we are close friends of the Vanderbilts. I am going to try to effect a reconciliation between Arlie Vanderbilt and his wife as soon as I get back east. Arlie knows that I was a very close friend of his wife, and he came to me to have me straighten out his domestic infelicity. He is a good fellow and he is very much broken up over the estrangement. He came to me and said, 'Charley, if there is any one in the world that can fix this thing up with my wife, it's you. If you'll return her to me I'll give you a million dollars.'"

"I tell dreadfully sorry for him, for I know that he loved his wife. I said to him: 'Archie, you know I don't need your million, but if I can possibly do this thing for you I'll do it gladly for the sake of friendship.' I'm going to do it, too."

"Nat Goodwin and I married sisters. Nat is a great fellow, the best actor in the business, and has lots of money, too. When he married my sister-in-law father gave them a check for $500,000 as a little wedding present. Father was a very liberal man with his friends."

"I have several checks in my pocket now, but I can't get them cashed. When my money comes I intend to go to Salt Lake City, where I have some acquaintances. I will be all right then."

Leach is about 35 years old and has every earmark of a man of culture. His clothing, while slightly worn for wear, is of metropolitan style and tailoring, and his manner and language bespeak refinement. It is possible that his mind has been affected by the change in altitude, which would not be an altogether uncommon occurrence. It is also possible that the man has wandered away from his home in the east without the knowledge of his family or friends.

At a late hour this afternoon Leach was still at the depot telling of his millions.

Count Komura is to resign

Tokio, Tuesday, Nov. 15.—The resignation of Count Komura, minister of foreign affairs, must be regarded as an event of the not far distant future. The primary cause for the announcement is made, but there are a number of causes leading up to what will be generally regarded in Japan as an unfortunate necessity.

It has been a somewhat open secret of late that differences of opinion existed between Komura and Kato, his minister of foreign affairs. The new tariff law enacted this year, goes into effect next July and the negotiations for conventions form the ground work for these differences.

Perhaps the effect of the statutory tariff upon foreign relations was not given sufficient consideration, but at any rate Japan's ally, Great Britain, has been giving much trouble to the foreign office in this connection.

Ambassador Kato, in London, it is reported, has not been in full sympathy with his government, or rather has advocated more liberal dealings with Great Britain as an ally. The result is that there will be changes in the statutory tariff or conventional tariffs much be made alongside of the statute.

Count Komura's friends assert that he was misled into making certain statements which he is now eager to retract or would be obliged to if he were a party to the changes now contemplated, consequently the resignation.

A canvass of the situation in the search for Count Komura's successor would probably result in the nomination of Mr. Kato himself, and his recall from London may be regarded as not unlikely.
